

EXODUS OF THE JAPANESE BEGINS

Forty Men Enticed by California Agents Sail in the Alameda.

About 40 Japanese laborers have been given tickets for passage in the Alameda, which sails for San Francisco this afternoon. The 40 represent the smooth work of a Japanese employment agent who has been in Honolulu for a few weeks offering wages ranging from $1.50 to $2 a day on various labor projects in California. Three or four Japanese from the Japanese hotels of San Francisco are also in the city endeavoring to draw away laborers to the coast, and the business element among the Japanese here fear that unless their countrymen are given to understand that their prospects in California are not so bright as painted by these men, the exodus will continue. The agents have enlisted the services of interpreters here to pave the way to secure health certificates.

A prominent Japanese stated yesterday that it was his belief that the agents were not only after men but wanted women as well, and as many of the latter as they could procure. The reasons for wanting to secure the women were obvious to him and his associates in business, and he hoped that the planters could devise some means to prevent the departures from assuming large proportions.

MY ISLANDS.

On the edge of the world my Islands lie,
Under the sun-steeped sky;
And their waving palms
Are bounding aims
To the soul-spent passer by.

On the edge of the world my Islands dream,
Under the tender gleam
Of moon and star
That beckon far
From worlds that only seem.

On the edge of the world my Islands sleep,
In a slumber soft and deep.
What should the know
Of a world of woe,
And myriad men that weep?

On the edge of the world my Islands wake,
And their languid sleep forsake.
They long to live
Their all to give,
And the work of the world partake.

On the edge of the world, dear Islands, stay,
Far from its clamorous day,
Content with calm,
Hold peace and balm,
Be Isles of the Blest, for aye.
—Mary Dillingham Frear, in the Friend for June.

A CLEVER COMEDY.

Sutton and Cogill's Entertainers to Present a Gaiety Girl.

"The Gaiety Girl," a clever little comedy with a cast of five characters, headed by Harry Cogill, will be a feature of the Sutton and Cogill vaudeville acts at their performance Saturday evening next. It is a breezy little sketch, full of witty sayings and with just enough plot to give it some solid interest.

Cogill and Male Arlea have another sketch entitled the "Booking Agent," which makes opportunity for plenty of burlesque, songs, dances and clever sayings. Miss Rose Aquinaldo appears to have especially commended herself to the public of Australasia and the Orient, the critics being apparently as appreciative of her personal appearance as her ability, which is undoubtedly.

The company is expected tomorrow on the Hongkong Maru, and the equilibrist and jugglers will have ample time to gain their hand legs by Saturday evening. Altro, the Tramp, is said to be a big drawing card, and besides Cogill, there are several good singers with the combination.
